A FEW ITEMS FROM PUNTA ARENAS

For those of you with limited (or no) interest in my diversions to the tip of South America, you can skip this article! For those of you who find this mildly interesting or amusing, I offer the following.

There is a very neat website maintained by Duncan Campbell (<http://patfotos.org/eng/index.html>). I have much of my Tierra del Fuego and Punta Arenas items shown there. Because of this, I was contacted in January by a lady in Chile offering a stock certificate and a few tokens. Through negotiation (there wasn't much negotiation, I offered too much!), I acquired two new tokens from Punta Arenas, and a very interesting stock certificate.

Menéndez Behety was a very large trading company in Patagonia and Tierra del Fuego. Based mainly in Punta Arenas, their interests included, but were not limited to wool, meat, shipping and general commerce. The medal above notes their 50th anniversary and was not part of this purchase.

EDITOR'S COMMENTS

After a week of visiting mom in Mass., I came back, and Jerry left on a 3 week vacation. So I am in the store alone, trying to get this out on time - I failed. It is only a little late.

With this in mind, I had to come up with something quick and when that is the case, you know it will be something where my current interest lies.

Acquiring the stock and tokens from Punta Arenas was interesting. A friend who retired to Chile actually went to the lady's house to purchase them for me, then another friend (his sister-in-law) brought them to Anchorage. I picked them up at Roy's Coins when I went down for the Quarter Commission meeting in April.

It seems that tokens from the ends of the world hold a strange attraction to many people. Punta Arenas tokens may not be as popular as Alaska tokens, but they share the same frontier appeal. After all, on the Pan-Am Highway, they are the end of the road!

Prices realized this month include our April 8 auction. Note the total savings to mail bidders from their maximum bids.

On eBay, there are a lot of tokens not receiving their opening bids. Some don't look too high, so I must guess it is just lack of interest. There are a few sellers shooting for the moon with their BIN (buy it now) prices. Fortunately, there are no takers!

The stock is registered in both Chile and Argentina. It carries the portraits of the founders, Jose Menéndez and his wife Maria Behety de Menéndez and the dates 1874 and 1910 at the top center. Each corner has a vignette of various aspects of their business. The upper right has their headquarters in Punta Arenas; bottom right is a view of Estancia Primera Argentina near Rio Grande, Argentine Tierra del Fuego; bottom left a view of San Gregorio on the north shore of the Straits of Magellan in Chile; and upper left, the dock at San Gregorio with the steamship Amadeo. A history of this ship can be found at <http://www.histarmar.com.ar/InfHistorica/Last%20Port%20of%20Call/Amadeo.htm>. The stock and tokens were purchased from the captain's granddaughter!

Tokens were issued in the name of Estancias Primera y Segunda Argentina. Primera was established about 1896, while Segunda was established about 1898. The stock is dated 1911 (registration date in Chile and Argentina), but only Primera is noted in the vignette. Estancia Primera Argentina was later renamed Estancia José Menéndez while Estancia Segunda Argentina was renamed Estancia Maria Behety.

I was also fortunate to add two new Punta Arenas tokens to my collection, and one duplicate.

Hotel Comercio is listed in a 1914 trade directory for South America published by the U.S. Department of Commerce. The name is misspelled "Commercio" on the token, indicating that it was manufactured in a non-Spanish speaking country. All of the Punta Arenas tokens are 21mm, brass, very similar to many U.S. tokens, leading me to assume that these were made in the U.S.

The second new token was another "En Consumo" token. I must admit that I don't know how these were used, but suspect that since all other tokens are 20 centavos, that these traded at a similar value, possibly with a quasi-legal tender status during a coin shortage.

Finally, the third token was a duplicate. There are two varieties of the Hotel Imperial token. The first, obviously a die sinker's error, placed PTA (an abbreviation for Punta) along the rim at the end of Hotel Imperial. My specimen of this is a nice AU. On the second Punta Arenas in the center of the token. My original and now duplicate of these tokens are worn and appear dug, possibly indicating these were used, while the first was rejected and not used. A postcard of the not very imposing Hotel Imperial is shown below.

For my ease in keeping track of these tokens, I am bringing them all together on the next page.

OTHER PATAGONIAN MEDALS

La Sociedad Anónima Importadora y Exportadora de la Patagonia was a firm established by José Menéndez and Mauricio Braun in 1908. This appears to be a presentation medal for 25 years of service. Note that the building looks to be the same as on the medal on the front page. Signed by Constante Rossi. The Rossi family were well known die cutters in Buenos Aires. Bronze, 38mm.

Sociedad Ganadera de Laguna Blanca was a sheep ranch north of Punta Arenas. This medal is for its 50th anniversary. The sheep obverse is also used on medals for the 50th anniversary of Sociedad Explotadora de Tierra del Fuego. Bronze, 37mm.

“VALES”

Since we are on the subject of Punta Arenas, here is some information on private currency or vales. Note that Menéndez-Behety is listed among the backers.

In her book, “Tierra del Fuego,” Rae Natalie Prosser Goodall” states that: “On the south side of Tierra del Fuego, Argentine money has always been used, although pound sterling, Chilean pesos and pure gold were also in circulation at various times. But on the north side of the island the naval ships arrived many years later. All contact was with Punta Arenas by ship or by crossing the Island to Porvenir. Chilean money or pounds sterling were used until 1925. The Freezer paid in vales (promissory notes) until about 1934.”

Reduced. Actual size 210mm x 83mm

This description makes these sound like the “Vale” we have from Punta Arenas.

David Guevara of Río Grande, Tierra del Fuego, Argentina sent the following. It is translated from “A Hacha, cuñ y golpe” Residents’ of Río Grande Memories by Maria Luisa Bou and Elida Reppetto, 1995.

Memories of Mirko Milosevik (1925).

“There was no frontier between Porvenir and Río Grande, it is as if it was one country. I arrive here (Río Grande, Argentina), they assisted me very well. I didn’t have a slip to enter or anything. I came without passport, in those years it was not demanded a lot. Manpower was needed and they could pass anyone. Formerly, when I ended up working here, they didn’t pay us. They gave us a notebook of the Compañía Frigorífica Argentina and in that notebook one wrote down the salary, what we bought in the warehouse, and they made us the discount. When we wanted to leave for Chile they gave us a “vale” to get paid in Punta Arenas in the Office of Menéndez. When we wanted to come it stops here, the office of Menéndez gave us passages, to go and to come, because I eat there was not personal they didn’t want to lose it.”

This description makes a “vale” sound like a paycheck, to be cashed with Menéndez.

Further research will be required to learn if the vales issued by Compañía Frigorífica Argentina were in the form of currency like the Punta Arenas vale, or if they took the form of a paycheck, to be cashed when the worker went to Punta Arenas.
